« And not in utter nakedness, But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home »

Ode. Intimations of Immortality from Recollections of Early Childhood, William Wordsworth, (1770-1850); quoted by Jack London (1876-1916), in his novel The star Rover, first published in the USA, in 1915.

RACHAEL

What if I go North?
To disappear.
Would you come after me?
Hunt me?

DECKARD

No, I wouldn't.
I owe you one.
But somebody would.

Ridley Scott, Blade Runner, 1982, 117 mn.
